

Bradley Brezinski

Brad is the founder and president of S2A Solutions, a Cincinnati-based provider of custom training solutions in the areas of culture, strategy, innovation and change leadership. He started the leadership development firm in 2014 with a simple mission: Develop 10 Percenters! A concept based on the fact that fewer than 10% of people say they understand their company's strategy and its connection to their daily work.

Prior to founding S2A Solutions, Brad served as the chief financial officer and vice president of corporate strategy for a Cincinnati-based defense and aerospace contract manufacturing firm. There he managed the firm's $150M+ project portfolio and helped turn around the company's performance on complex Department of Defense projects.

He is a graduate of the US Navy's Nuclear Power Program and holds a Bachelor of Science in nuclear engineering technology. Over the course of his decorated and diverse military career, he served as executive officer, department head, program manager for nuclear systems, and technical advisor for carrier electrical power systems. Brad is also a doctoral fellow in strategy and innovation at Case Western Reserve University.

Brad is a frequent keynote speaker and recognized thought leader on strategy design and execution. He has taught innovation and design thinking at Harvard Business School, Naval Postgraduate School, Air Force Institute of Technology and organizations ranging from Fortune 500 businesses to startups to nonprofits. In 2016, he was recognized by the Cincinnati Business Courier as one of the city's Forty Under 40. He's an avid trail runner, red wine enthusiast and aspiring guitarist who calls Loveland, Ohio home.
